- Competition results will be tracked separately from GBU Random Matchups, and the competition ranking will be displayed in the Competition Info section.

Usable Pokémon

- All Pokémon Level 51 or higher will have their level reduced to Level 50 during the battle.
- Pokémon below Level 50 remain at their actual level rather than being raised to Level 50 for the battle.
- A player's team may not contain two Pokémon with the same National Pokédex number.

- Pokémon may use only moves learned by one of these methods:
 - 1) By leveling up
 - 2) By TM or HM
 - 3) As an Egg Move, through breeding
 - 4) From a character in the game
 - 5) Already known by a Pokémon received at an official Pokémon event or promotion

Battle Box

- Before the battle starts, the Pokémon on each player's team will be displayed briefly to his or her opponent. Moves and held items are not displayed.
- When you register your Pokémon for the Wi-Fi Competition after receiving the Digital Player ID, your Battle Box will be locked. You will no longer be able to change your Pokémon's moves or held items. Do not change the order of moves for Pokémon in your locked Battle Box during the competition, or errors may occur that prevent you from completing your battles.

Items

- Each Pokémon on a player's team may use held items, though no two Pokémon may hold the same item during battle.
- All items must have been acquired in Pokémon Black Version 2, Pokémon White Version 2, Pokémon Black Version, or Pokémon White Version, through the Pokémon Global Link, or at an official Pokémon event or promotion.
- Pokémon may not hold the item Soul Dew.

Move Effects

- The move Nature Power will turn into Earthquake.
- The move Secret Power has a 30% chance of lowering the opponent's accuracy by one stage.
- The move Camouflage changes the user's type to Ground type.

Winner in Special Cases

- If a player's final Pokémon used Selfdestruct, Explosion, Destiny Bond, or Final Gambit, and both players' final Pokémon faint as a result, the player who used the move loses that game.
- If a player's final Pokémon used Double Edge, Volt Tackle, Flare Blitz, Take Down, Submission, Brave Bird, Wood Hammer, Head Smash, Struggle, or Wild Volt, or was holding Life Orb, and both players' final Pokémon faint as a result, the player who used the move wins that game.
- If both players' final Pokémon faint due to damage from a weather condition, such as Hail or Sandstorm, the player whose Pokémon faints last wins the game.
- If a Pokémon's Ability (such as Rough Skin, Aftermath, Liquid Ooze, or Iron Barbs) or held item (such as Rocky Helmet), results in each player's final Pokémon fainting, the player whose Pokémon had the Ability or held item wins the game.

Time Limit

- The tournament timer automatically counts down during your battle. If time runs out before either player causes his or her opponent's final Pokémon to faint, the winner of the game will be determined by the criteria below.
 - 1) Remaining Pokémon
 - a. If one player has more remaining Pokémon than the other, that player wins the game.
 - b. If both players have the same number of Pokémon remaining, the winner is determined by average percentage of HP remaining.

2) Average Percentage of HP Remaining

- a. If one player's team has a higher average percentage of HP remaining, that player wins the game.
- b. If both players' teams have the same average HP remaining, the result of the game is determined by total HP remaining.

3) Total HP Remaining

- a. If one player's team has a higher total HP remaining, that player wins the game.
- b. If both players' teams have the same total HP remaining, the game is a tie.

Turn Timer

- The timer counts down while players are choosing moves.
- If time runs out, a move is automatically chosen for you, so be careful.

Prizes

- All participants who enter the ranking will earn a Rowap Berry.

Rowap Berry

When the holder takes damage from a special attack, the Pokémon that landed the attack is also damaged.

- In each of the three Play! Pokémon age divisions, 128 North American players and 128 European players will earn Championship Points, which will contribute toward qualifying for the 2013 Pokémon Video Game World Championships.

Notes

You may be penalized or disqualified from all future competitions if you break the following rules.

- Using third-party hardware or software to modify saved game data to modify or create Pokémon.
- Having a significant number of disconnects during matches (after you are matched with an opponent but before the match results are uploaded). Do not use an unstable Internet connection or you may be penalized.
- Harassing other players or behaving inappropriately.
- Software cracking or obstructing the competition in any way.
- Registering under a false name or using other false information during registration.
- Any other behavior that is inappropriate or disruptive to the competition.

Battle Etiquette

In Wi-Fi Competition battles, players can't see each other, so be considerate. Follow the proper battle etiquette and play fairly.

1 Once you have an opponent, finish the match!

Once you are matched with an opponent, do not turn off the power or disconnect until the match is completed and the results have uploaded. Turning off the power or disconnecting before a match is completed may result in penalties.

If you absolutely must forfeit a match, choose the Run command on your turn and then select the option to forfeit. Forfeiting a match counts as a loss. Please avoid forfeiting as much as possible by only playing matches when you have enough time to finish the match.

2 Be considerate of your opponents.

Do not harass, insult, or slander other players on Internet message boards, blogs, or anywhere else. Show your excellent sportsmanship even after a match ends.

Players who do not follow these rules or who attempt to obstruct the competition may be penalized.

Players with a significant number of disconnects will be dropped from the final rankings.

Read the "1. Once you have an opponent, finish the match!" section carefully, follow the competition rules, and avoid disconnecting during a match.

Play only matches using a stable Internet connection, and charge your system fully before beginning a match.

If a player is found to be behaving in a way not befitting a Pokémon Trainer at any time, he or she may be disqualified from participating in all current and future competitions.
